

This is unquestionably a bad idea. The impact of this decision will effect every electronics and computer manufacturer. The industry is suffering enough of a slump as it is with out a slew of new regulations to have to contend with. This will also immediately create a black market for older systems or hacked systems that lack the copy protection schemes.